The University of Law

The University of Law is one of the UK's longest-established specialist providers of legal education. Our origins can be traced back to 1876 with the formation of the leading tutorial firm Gibson & Weldon, and later on, with the establishment of The Law Society School of Law. In 1962 the two were amalgamated to establish The College of Law. We were the first-ever independent institution to be granted degree awarding powers and not long after, in 2012 we gained university title.

We're at the heart of legal education as the acknowledged leader in innovative, professional legal education for prospective lawyers and professional development training for those already qualified. Over the years, we have worked with virtually every UK law firm to help meet their training and development needs, with many firms sending their trainees exclusively to us.

We made history in 2006 by becoming the first independent institution to be granted degree awarding powers by the Privy Council, leading to the development of our professionally-focused Bachelor and Master of Laws degree programmes.

Offering: The University of Law are one of the UK's longest-established specialist providers of legal education. We deliver the SQE, LPC & BPC courses for students wanting to follow the pathway to becoming a solicitor & barrister. We also deliver conversion courses so if your degree isn't in law you can still qualify and practise as a lawyer. Locations include: Bristol, Exeter, Manchester, Leeds, Liverpool, London, and many other cities across the UK. We also have our Online campus and one in Hong Kong too.

Recruiting for: Postgraduate study options.

Disciplines required: Law. However, we offer conversion courses for those with non-law backgrounds to be able to convert into law.
